Natsumatsuri Virtual Summer Festival

The culturally-rich program featured entertainment from Japan and Hawaii; a segment on how Matsuri is celebrated in both countries; sake etiquette by Sake Sommelier Keith Nakaganeku of The Cherry Company; and even an exciting interactive game and great prize.

Attendees also had the option to partake in traditional matsuri food by ordering an EXCLUSIVE JASH Natsumatsuri Bento Box created especially for our event by Izakaya Nonbei and Zigu restaurants. They were also able to purchase delicious sake to enjoy while eating their bento and listening to wonderful entertainment by Yuttai Kwattai, Anju Makoda, Hikariyama Torao and Eden Kai.

Natsumatsuri Co-Chairs Toby Tamaye and John Rankin provided lively commentary between segments with Toby live-streaming from Izakaya Nonbei and John live-streaming from his home against a backdrop of traditional matsuri fireworks.

Origami Tutorial Series With the Origami Swami

This Summer, JASH was proud to host a popular virtual tutorial series featuring Hawaii’s Origami Swami, Ashley Nishihara, of the Hawaii Origami Club. This program was created to replace a few of JASH’s regular educational programs such as Japan Day and Japan-in-a-Suitcase which were cancelled or postponed due to the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic.

Our goal was to continue to provide students with educational opportunities regarding Japanese culture even though the pandemic dictated the need to socially-distance. We were thrilled to take advantage of the wide-reaching features of the Internet as participants live-streamed our program from not only Hawaii but also from the continental U.S., Japan, and even Central America.

Our first origami session in the three-part series was held in late June 2020. During the second tutorial session entitled Storygami 101 held on Friday, July 10, 2020, over 20 attendees made a penguin, a heart brooch and a rabbit while listening to a collection of fun short stories.

As the name implies, Storygami is a combination of storytelling and origami.

President’s Message

Aloha JASH members, colleagues and friends,

This year, 2020, is certainly testing our ability to cope, be flexible and ready to change course at a moment’s notice. The term, “think outside the box” has never before been as urgent and necessary as it is today. We, the staff of JASH, are grateful to you for your support, participation and encouragement during these challenging times. As you can see by this issue, we did not miss a beat in continuing to produce quality programs that served a variety of your interests. Everything from Origami lessons to cultural and historical talks and our very first and wildly successful JASH Natsumatsuri—and all of this brought to you VIRTUALLY! It was quite a feat, teaching ourselves new tricks of the trade, but worth every minute of effort as we saw how we could still bring everyone together in a meaningful way.

Going forward, we remain committed to “reimagining” all that we do to serve you and our community and to better serve our mission of keeping strong the U.S.-Hawaii-Japan relationship via the power of people-to-people connection. We wish you good health, stay safe always!

Isshoni mae wo mute arukou,

Reyna

JASH Featured on Living 808

JASH President, Reyna Kaneko, was a featured guest on KHON2’s Living 808 morning news show on Monday, July 6, 2020. Program Co-host Tannya Joaquin interviewed Reyna as she spoke about JASH’s popular virtual Origami Tutorial session with veteran JASH volunteer, Ashley Nishihara of the Hawaii Origami Club which took place on June 19, 2020.

Two additional Storygami segments in the series ran on July 10$^{th}$ and 24$^{th}$. The classes were geared towards grades 1-5, but older students and adults also enjoyed the activity.

Consul General Koichi Ito and Mrs. Ito sending their greetings to the audience. Consul General congratulated JASH for our efforts to perpetuate Japanese culture through new means because of the pandemic.

The NexGen is JASH’s group of our next generation of leaders comprised of young professionals under the age of 50 years old. To learn more about the NexGen and how to get involved, please contact Lila Frisbie at lfrisbie@jashawaii.org or ph. 524-4450.

The story is told while the origami paper is being folded simultaneously to reflect what is happening in each story. This process fulfills the same role that illustrations do as they accompany stories.

Our instructor, Ashley, explained “this dynamic method of teaching origami engages people of all ages, especially young children who might find it difficult to adhere to the highly technical step-by-step process origami instruction usually entails.”

At our final session on Friday, July 24, 2020, participants enjoyed a longer storygami called The Wishin’ Magician by Rachel Katz, where they folded a duck, and a bonus mystery origami with interactive questions and answers.

Ashley has been doing origami since age six and she taught origami at Le Jardin Academy’s after school program for seven years. She is one of the organizers of the Hawaii Origami Club and volunteers at various events (including JASH’s Japan Day and Japan Wizards Competition since 2014) to introduce the art of origami to Hawaii’s youth.

JASH would like to express a big MAHALO to Ashley for providing fun and educational origami tutorials for our members and students. We hope to offer more virtual educational programs in the near future so please stay tuned!

For our final workshop, we began with a special lesson about Sadako Sasaki, Hiroshima, and the significance of the thousand paper cranes by retired Punahou Japanese Language Faculty Naomi Hirano-Omizo-sensei. The JAs learned about the bombing of Hiroshima and subsequent aftermath, were inspired by Sadako’s story of compassion and perseverance, and learned how to fold their own orizuru folded cranes.

JASH 2020 APCC Program

The Asian-Pacific Children’s Convention (APCC) is an annual homestay and summer camp in Fukuoka that welcomes delegations of 11-year-old Junior Ambassadors (JAs) from regions throughout Asia and the Pacific.

JASH has the honor of serving at the liaison office for the Hawaii delegation and we usually spend months preparing the JAs for the culminating trip in July every year.

Because of the pandemic, we made the difficult decision early on to withdraw from this year’s APCC trip to Fukuoka to ensure the safety of our JAs as well as our chaperone. The APCC in Fukuoka cancelled the entire program for this Summer soon thereafter.

Instead of following suit and cancelling our JASH APCC program, we made the ambitious decision to transform our regular APCC workshop curriculum into virtual culture and history lessons led by Christianne Ono, JASH Program Assistant and Takako Miyazawa, JASH Educational Program Director. Our goal was to teach our JAs all that we could regarding all things Japanese just as we would have if the program had continued on as initially planned. Our APCC JAs displayed incredible resilience and optimism as we made the transition. In July, after social-distancing guidelines were relaxed to allow for a maximum of five people to meet, JASH welcomed our delegation back to the office for two final APCC workshops.

During the first workshop, our JAs worked on the APCC’s “BRIDGE Question Exchange” as part of the organization’s BRIDGE Summer <WEB> Camp. For this project, delegations were assigned to groups with four other regions and submitted questions they wanted to ask the other groups. Each JA then answered the questions using text, drawings, or photos, and their posters were uploaded and shared on the Summer <WEB> Camp website. Our talented JAs illustrated each of their answers!

The JAs learned about the bombing of Hiroshima and subsequent aftermath, were inspired by Sadako’s story of compassion and perseverance, and learned how to fold their own orizuru folded cranes.

After the lesson, the JAs then met several members of Bridge Club Hawaii, the APCC alumni group, through a Zoom meet-and-greet. We ended the morning with a snack party as we learned about the other delegations through the APCC BRIDGE Summer <WEB> Camp materials.

While at JASH wish we could’ve given the JAs the international experience for which they were so eager, we nevertheless enjoyed learning about Japan with everyone. Since March, we’ve talked about food etiquette and the Japanese perspective of nutrition; sports and exercise; anime, manga, and drawing; summer festivals; and Sadako Sasaki and her thousand paper cranes.

We were also very fortunate to welcome guest teachers including manga artist Kazuo Maekawa-sensei, Origami Swami Ashley Nishihara-sensei, and Japanese language teacher Naomi Hirano-Omizo-sensei.

Even without the physical trip, it is our hope that our JAs were still able to learn about Japan and Japanese culture through our workshops. We hope that we’ll continue to see more of our 2020 JAs at future Bridge Club Hawaii activities and other JASH events, and we’re excited to watch them grow into kind, mindful, global citizens.

Tohoku—From Devastation to Resilience

On July 16, 2020, JASH hosted its first of four Summer Talk-Story webinars entitled, Tohoku Earthquake and Tsunami: From Devastation to Resilience. We were fortunate to have Ray Tabata, veteran JASH member and photography-afficionado, share his personal experience and profound interactions with the survivors of the 2011 Tohoku earthquake and tsunami with us. The webinar illustrated the resilience of the Japanese people after the disaster.

He shared several photos from his collection which showed the devastation and despair that occurred after the disaster. More importantly, he also shared other photos which illustrated the steadfast resilience and dedication of the Japanese people in their efforts to rebuild and rebound.

Tyler is a member of JASH’s NexGen Advisory Board and continues to play an active role as a member of JCI Honolulu.

In an effort to continue to promote JASH’s mission, one of JASH’s initiatives has been to cultivate our next generation of leaders.

Over the past year, the JASH NexGen Advisory Board comprised of JASH young leaders have been hard at work planning and producing several exciting and innovative events for JASH.

We started off with the popular Taste of JASH series featuring cuisine from five regions that Hawaii has Sister-State relationships with in Japan. We then hosted three intimate Movers & Shakers small-group talk-story sessions with prominent leaders in our community. We even held a panel discussion where tables were turned and three NexGen representatives were featured.

The culminating event was to be a full-scale in-person Natsumatsuri festival this Summer. Unfortunately, due to the COVID-19 pandemic, we were forced to transform the event into a virtual one. Nevertheless, the fundraising event was a huge success and reached a far wider audience geographically than any in-person event could have.

The evolution of the JASH NexGen Advisory Board and committee has been nothing short of remarkable as well as inspirational. Our JASH Chair, Steve Sombrero, recognized this jewel in the rough early on and convinced the Board to open up seats on the JASH Board to two deserving young professionals.

It was not only a way to recognize and reward this group but also an effort to harness the innate enthusiasm and innovative way of thinking that this group possesses. The Board agreed with Chair Sombrero as they recognized the value of allowing this group to have a say in the governing of JASH.

By allowing two NexGen representatives to sit among them, they filled a need to have JASH liaisons start to involve our organization with this promising demographic group. After all, it is where our future lies. Congratulations to John Rankin and Tyler Hiranaka for their nomination to the Board.

A Question of Loyalty
A Talk-Story Session with the Author

On July 22, 2020, JASH hosted its second of four Summer Talk-Story webinars entitled, “A Question of Loyalty: Five Inflection Points on the Road to Dignity.”

Mike Malaghan discussed his new book, A Question of Loyalty, which dramatizes the Nisei struggle to prove their loyalty to a doubtful country wary of their presence. He covered five inflection points, one being “How a 17-year old Japanese-American au pair and a Chinese man shaped Hawaii’s successful resistance to Franklin D. Roosevelt’s order to remove Japanese from Oahu.” To find out what the other four inflection points were, or to view the full webinar, please click here.

Mike Malaghan, life-time JASH member and author, spent a large part of his career in the corporate world on four continents, but knew in his heart that he was a writer.

Hachijōjima: The Language Isle

On July 30, 2020, JASH hosted another installment in our Summer 2020 Talk-Story Series entitled, Hachijōjima: The Language Isle. We were very fortunate to collaborate with linguist Dr. David Iannucci, who introduced attendees to the small island of Hachijōjima and the severely endangered Hachijō language that is spoken there.

Dr. Iannucci received his PhD in Linguistics from the University of Hawai‘i at Mānoa in 2019. He briefly visited Hachijōjima twice for linguistic fieldwork, consulting community members and collecting information for his dissertation, The Hachijō Language of Japan: Phonology and Historical Development. Drawing from his own experiences and research, Dr. Iannucci gave attendees a virtual tour of Hachijōjima by using Google Maps and sharing photos from his fieldwork trips.

In his presentation, Dr. Iannucci also compared basic vocabulary items in Japanese versus the Nakanogo variety of Hachijō. The Hachijō language systematically differs from Standard Japanese, Dr. Iannucci explained, which is one of the reasons why linguists can determine they are genetically related and share a common language ancestor.

However, due to factors such as geographical distance, Hachijō has diverged so much from Japanese that they are barely mutually intelligible. That is, if a speaker of standard, current-day Japanese tried to talk with someone who only spoke Hachijō, they would not be able to communicate! Unfortunately, due to social, political, and economic factors, most of the younger generations no longer know Hachijō. As transmission of the language from parent to child has halted over several generations, the language is now considered to be severely endangered as the community has instead shifted to using the Japanese language.

There have been small grassroots efforts to revitalize Hachijō, and Dr. Iannucci hopes that his and his fellow researchers’ work will help these projects receive attention and support to grow and continue.

As a linguist, Dr. Iannucci primarily focuses on

Married to a Tochigi “new Issei” and living in Hawaii, he knew the story of the Nisei Territorial Guard, who were stripped of their uniforms was a story that needed to be told. He is currently working on the final book of his trilogy. Mike’s books are available for purchase on Amazon.com.

JASH would like to express our sincere appreciation to Mike for hosting this historically-significant webinar for JASH and our members.

Tohoku Resilience

This inspiring webinar closed with a rendition of “Elegy” performed by renown Japanese classical pianist Nobuyuki Tsujii at Carnegie Hall in a tribute to all victims of the Tohoku disaster.

Ray retired as a Program Specialist from the University of Hawaii John A. Burns School of Medicine in May 2011. Since then, he has been spending his time enjoying photography, listening to classical music, and traveling to Japan. He has made numerous trips to Tohoku from 2012 to present with his last trip taking place in March 2020.

Ray has been a loyal member of JASH since April 2006. Currently serving as Co-Chair of JASH’s Tomodachi Committee, he has helped to coordinate numerous committee programs for JASH over the years and was even a featured speaker on several occasions. JASH would like to express our sincere appreciation to Ray for hosting this poignant webinar for JASH and our members. Access a recording of the program by clicking here.
